Role Reversal

2003 version bears eerie resemblance to last year's showdown

By Zach Baker
SPORTS EDITOR

A nationally-ranked team is traveling to face a difficult conference opponent in front of a large, loud crowd.

That was the case last season when the 16th ranked Falcons went to De Kalb, Ill. to face Northern Illinois.

The Huskies, aided by a stadium full of fans and noise, pulled off a 26-17 win over the Falcons, ending their undefeated season. BG would go on to lose two of its final three games, finishing the season at 9-3.

Falcon head coach Gregg Brandon said the atmosphere in Northern Illinois made it difficult for BG.

"We were intimidated from the get-go, we couldn't hear," Brandon said. "... we didn't think it'd be noisy. It was noisier [in Northern Illinois] than it was at Purdue or Ohio State this year."

Now, the roles are reversed. Northern Illinois, on the strength of an undefeated season, is ranked 14th in the ESPN/USA Today Coaches poll and 12th in the Associated Press poll.

They will be playing at Doyt L. Perry Stadium, which is sold out for the first time since 1983.

Quarterback Josh Harris talked about the Northern Illinois game after last week's win over Eastern Michigan.

"This is a showdown right now," Harris said. "They're undefeated, and the stage is set."

Harris said that this year's game resembles the BG-Northern Illinois game from last year.

"It's almost the exact opposite of what it was for us last year," Harris said. "We went into their place, and we all know the result. This Falcon football team has a little bit of a chip on our shoulder."

Falcon lineman Mike Thaler said the Falcons want to get back at NIU for last season.

"We went in there the undefeated team ... they knocked us off," Thaler said. "It's complete role reversal [this year], so we're looking to pay back to them what they did to us last year."

Linebacker Mitch Hewitt said it will be big for the BG fans to create an intimidating atmosphere on Saturday.

"We need the fans more this week than

ESPN: increase in patrons for businesses

The combination of Family Weekend and College GameDay coming to campus this weekend promises increased enthusiasm in the community as well as increased sales for local businesses.

Area restaurants, hotels and stores are putting their best foot forward this weekend for students and their families, alumni and of course ESPN.

SamB's Restaurant, 146 N. Main St., is ready to "beef up the staff and make sure there are plenty of steaks," said Peggy Leatherman, manager of 13 years at the restaurant. ESPN ground crew members were spotted surveying the restaurant and its menu on Wednesday, Leatherman said.

Leatherman is enthusiastic about the effect the weekend will have on local businesses. "They

With the party rolling into Bowling Green on Saturday, city and campus police are preparing to keep things safe and secure.

Chief Jim Wiegand, director of public safety at the University, said he does not anticipate many problems, but is still scheduling "more than double the usual amount of officers" to deal with the expected crowd.

According to Wiegand, aside from the increased number of officers, there will be no change in policies or procedures.

schools this season as the reason why ESPN is in BG this week.

"The MAC has been kicking butt the last few weeks," Lion said. "We actually wanted to go to a MAC game for awhile now and with Northern Illinois and Bowling Green doing very well this year ... This was probably going to be the only opportunity for us to actually come to a MAC game. It was always kind of high on our radar screens and when all the pieces of the puzzle kind of fit into place with other teams losing and making those matchups less appealing. So it was like,

'yeah let's pull the trigger and come to Bowling Green.'

When choosing a location for GameDay, Lion and his crew look for more than the marquee matchup. While the Bowl Championship Series rankings do factor into the decision, Lion said that they also look for sentimental value in the games they choose. Last year they did their show from the Harvard-Pennsylvania Ivy League Championship game and this season they made the trip to Westpoint for an Army game.

"We like to do new and different things that we have never done before," Lion said. "Clearly we have never come to Bowling Green, so that was also one of the enticing things for being here was; 'hey we've never done it, it seems like a good place to do a show from, let's hope all the pieces fall together, and they did.'"

In order to make an episode of GameDay possible, Lion and his crew put in an average of 40 hours over two days — the day before and the day of the game. In addition, Lion has people back at ESPN Plaza in Bristol, Conn. planning and preparing for next weeks show while he is on sight preparing for the upcoming event. The biggest reward Lion takes out of all this work is seeing the support of the fans; something he is hoping to see a lot of tomorrow.

"I'm hoping we get them [BG fans] out in droves, I'm hoping there's a ton of people out here," Lion said. "One of the things that makes GameDay exciting for us is the fans. If it wasn't for fan involvement and fans just being a part of the whole atmosphere of the game, it wouldn't be as much of a fun show to do as being a road show."

This season the GameDay crew will spend every week of the season on the road, something Lion and his crew prefer.

"We can always do a show from Bristol, but it just isn't the same," Lion said. "The problem ... when we do a Bristol show is that it just sort of lacks the intensity and the energy. The whole crew, everybody from Chris [Fowler], Lee [Corso] and Kirk [Herbstreit] on down just feed off the energy once the show starts and you get that from a crowd. The crowd just kind of 'geeks you up' and that's what we look forward to. What I'm hoping for from the folks here in Bowling Green is that they come out in droves and make the MAC what we hope it is going to be."

GameDay goes on the air live on ESPN from in front of "the Doyt" tomorrow at 10:30 a.m.

GameDay, exposure likely to fill hotels restaurants this weekend

[businesses] will definitely be affected on the plus side with additional revenue being generated."

Local hotels are also feeling the impact of additional visitors to the area.

According to Caren Zaft, a manager at Days Inn, 1550 E. Wooster St., the hotel is completely filled with more than 300 people on a waiting list.

"I wish we had three more hotels this size in the area - we would have filled them up," Zaft said.

The University hockey team playing Union College has also stimulated the need for rooms in addition to Family Weekend and GameDay, Zaft said.

Area book stores are also experiencing an increase in sales as anything orange and brown flies off the shelves for the big game.

Steve Donnelly, University alumnus and manager of the Student Book Exchange, 530 E. Wooster St. for 20 years, said GameDay shirts, orange wigs and anything warm for the cold weather have been hot sellers.

According to Donnelly, the store has been busy and is excited for Family Weekend as well as the arrival of GameDay.

"A lot of things had to fall together in the cosmic universe for this to happen - it's just amazing."

But many of the benefits the city and University will receive are not monetary, Assistant Athletic Director of Financial Affairs David Saylor said.

"From an athletic standpoint the biggest benefit is recruiting, and from a University standpoint it is a chance to showcase the University and town," he said.

Saylor said the athletic department is thrilled to have ESPN on campus and that ESPN is thrilled to be here.

"They [ESPN] think it's great to be at a MAC school and see what a MAC school is all about," he said.

Security prepared for game patrons

alcohol will be permitted inside the stadium," Wiegand said. This policy will be enforced the same as it has been at all the other home games this year, he said.

Wiegand also said his officers "will be monitoring backpacks and packages coming into the stadium for anything that could be considered illegal or dangerous."

Besides a major increase in the number of cars, there will be no change in parking — it will still be $5, and the lot will open at 6:30 a.m.

Wiegand noted that aside from dealing with students, his officers will be very busy providing security for the overwhelming number of non-student fans, and also for the entire GameDay entourage.

"It's not just the students, it's our job to provide a safe and secure environment for everyone, including both teams, and all the fans."

Wiegand said he is confident students and fans will behave well, and encourages them "to be respectful of fellow fans and opposing fans, show good sportsmanship, have a great time and cheer on the Falcons."

Miami (Ohio) plans $5 million fix-ups

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio — With enrollment nearly doubled in the past 20 years, Miami University's Middletown campus plans to build a $5 million building to serve students and the community.

The 21,600 square-foot center would expand the existing Johnston Hall building on the southwest Ohio campus, about 25 miles north of Cincinnati.

The Hawk Haven, a student lounge and study area in the building, would be renovated and account for 7,850 square feet of the new building's space, school officials said Wednesday.

Enrollment at the campus was about 1,500 when a lecture hall was renovated into the Hawk Haven 20 years ago. Today it is nearly 3,000.

University officials hope donors and state capital appropriations will pay for half of the center's cost. A fund-raising committee has been formed.

The campus has already received a gift of $330,000, development director Sherry Pieratt said. Construction could start in the fall of 2004 if donations are secured, officials said. Construction would take about 15 months.

Players say crowd support will be instrumental we have ever needed them since I've been here," Hewitt said. "Northern Illinois' crowd (last year) was like a 12th man and it affected the game. I hope this week our student body and our fans come out and do the same thing to help us win."

Of course, in order to win, BG will also have to contain the NIU running game, and specifically, Heisman Trophy candidate Michael Turner.

Turner rushed for over 100 yards in the Huskies' win over Western Michigan Saturday, making it the 17th time he has done it in his career.

One of those games was last season against BG, when Turner rushed for 192 yards on 40 carries.

The Falcons are coming off a game in which the defense had trouble stopping the run.

Eastern Michigan's Anthony Sherrell was able to avoid tackles and rush for 187 yards in BG's 33-20 win.

Thaler said that letting Turner have success on the ground could open up the passing game for NIU.

"We can't let the run beat us too bad because they're going to run it and run it, and then ... they're going to hit us with a deep pass," Thaler said. "Up front, we gotta be able to stop that run."

Despite all the hype and emotion surrounding the game, Brandon said it shouldn't have a negative effect on BG.

"Our kids remember last year, how disappointing that loss was, Brandon said. " ... we don't need to say much about that stuff. We need to block and tackle, that's what we need to do."

The game will take place at 4 p.m. at Doyt Perry Stadium tomorrow.

Music college to host Young People's series

THE BG NEWS

Tomorrow, the College of Musical Arts will launch the seventh season of its Young People's Concert series. With "Horns-a-Plenty," the college will continue its work towards introducing various styles of music to children. The show will take place in Bryan Recital Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center at 11 a.m.

At this first concert, Assistant Professor of Horn Rosemary Williams will detail the history and development of the horn. With help from the BGSU Horn Ensemble, will demonstrate the versatility of this instrument.

On Nov. 15, the series continues with The BGSU Women's Chorus and director Dr. Mark Munson's "The Trouble with Trebles." It continues with "Clarinet Candy," presented by the Clarinet Choir and director Kevin Schempf on Dec. 6.

After an off month in January, the series picks back up on Feb. 7 with the harp students from the studio of Julie Buzzelli presenting "You Gotta Have Harp."

The series then finishes off the season with "Funharmonia," featuring the Bowling Green Philharmonia conducted by Dr. Emily Freeman Brown. Though meant for children over 5 years of age, all ages are welcome at the concerts, which last 45 minutes each and cost $1 for children and $2 for adults. Space is limited, so attendees are encouraged to arrive early in order to get a seat.

Safety is a big factor at GameDay

Everyone knows how exciting this weekend is going to be.

For the first time in its history, Doyt L. Perry Stadium will host a nationally televised game.

ESPN GameDay will be on campus, broadcasting live tomorrow morning.

Our football team will be engaged in perhaps its most important game ever.

Certainly, there is reason for celebration, reason to smile, reason to get wild and have fun.

A win over Northern Illinois would be huge in both the standings of the Mid-American Conference and also in improving BG's bowl chances.

Everyone should enjoy the weekend.

But there is a limit.

Most of us know where the limit lies. While sometimes the difference between fun and recklessness can be surprisingly thin, we owe it to our school, our families, and most of all, ourselves, to respect that difference.

Everyone should be able to embrace this incredible weekend, and everyone has the right to enjoy it as much as possible.

But doing something to endanger yourself and others should not be part of that equation.

Incidents in Toledo and Nebraska should act as reminders to all of us that there can be harm, in some cases life-altering harm, in taking fun at a football game too far.

Our football coach and the administrators on this campus encourage a boisterous and atmosphere for the game tomorrow.

But encouraging enthusiasm is not the same as asking fans to go beyond it.

The fact is that no one wants to see someone get hurt, and no one wants to be a detriment to the football team rather than an advantage.

Gregg Brandon said earlier this week that the fans can have a great influence on the game by being loud and intimidating.

So when we head out to the stadium tomorrow, we should be ready to support BG in any way possible.

But we should also be safe.

We should make it as difficult as possible for Northern Illinois to hear when they enter the field.

That's what Northern Illinois fans did to BG players last season.

As fans, we can have a major impact on tomorrow's game.

Let's just make sure it's the right type of impact.

Let's make ESPN and the rest of the country wonder why it has taken so long to come to Bowling Green.

Let's make sure that the rest of the country sees that BG is a great place for football.

Education on diversity can help rid society of much ignorance

BRADWEAVER
Opinion Columnist

On the 7th floor of Offenbauer East there is social activism going on — D.A.L.E. (Diversity Awareness and Language Education) project.

This project's goal is to point out that words seen as hateful, derogatory and racist are being haphazardly used by many people in daily life. Many are unaware that they even use them. The major ideas behind the D.A.L.E. project, (reducing hate and division) are great.

The problem becomes the context of the situation in which these words are being used. Our rights as Americans to say whatever we want no matter the social or personal effect be, do not directly agree with this form of personalized censorship. Regardless of what you believe, you should come over and check this out to make up your own mind.

One of the issues brought up by D.A.L.E. is the use of gender biased wording in every day life. Should everyone use completely limp language when speaking about men and women? Is it a good thing to use words which have no connection to those being spoken? Of course not! You will never get people to even pay attention to things that don't have an effect on them. So, gender loaded statements are a good thing.

Seriously though, does anyone have an overwhelming problem with the word "mankind?"

Is it really such an oppressive and dominating word, one used to keep the female of the species under the boot heel of men that it must be left out of our daily speech? If you answered yes, you are one of two things: a highly radicalized feminist who will never be satisfied with the way the world is until women dominate men or you are an extremely noble and caring person who would go to the extent of ridiculous self sacrifice to make your fellow human beings feel more comfortable when you talk. Even so, just because some people feel this way does not mean it is the best or correct way to deal with gender loaded language.

What about the perceived racist aspect of language?

A few of the sentences from the D.A.L.E. project refer to these things directly such as, "that's gay," "you can't Jew me down," and "we can just nigger-rig it." I don't really find anything intrinsically wrong with these sentences. Nobody seems to even try to look at them for their positive connotations; everyone's just too preoccupied with the hate.

How great is it that within a 50 year time span, homosexuality went from being a subject so misunderstood and feared that people didn't speak about it, to developing into an open, more accepted lifestyle.

Generally, gay people are looked at as energetic, flamboyant and very knowledgeable about art and fashion, which is by any standard are not derogatory. Our society has progressed to the point where shows like "Will and Grace" and "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy" are not only acceptable, but popular. With this in mind, I don't find someone saying "that's gay" bad at all.

The Jewish community is looked at as well-populated with very talented, rich and powerful businessmen. After all the Jews have been through, they have not only survived but thrived in the world.

The Jewish community is also seen as so intelligent and good at making deals and working things out for themselves that other people, being forced to recognize this, pay attention when doing business with them. The thought of how good they are at business has even led some radical individual to believe there is a worldwide Jewish conspiracy (This of course is nuts, and the fact that some people believe it is a testament to how smart Jews are is amazing, I even know a couple of Jews who think its more hilarious than derogatory).

Another historically oppressed group are blacks. In spite of the fact that they have been oppressed they just keep prevailing.

Fifty years ago blacks weren't even treated like people. Now they have brought themselves into a position where more than ever before can continually progress. Within this line of thinking we find the term, "nigger-rig."

I recognize that the "N" word is so heated that people will probably never get over it, but please bear with me. This term signifies that even when a black person is being kept down, you can't keep them down.

If something breaks they'll fix it in an incredibly inventive way, whether it be a car, a toaster or a stereo. For a limitless number of problems that occur, they have found limitless solutions. It is because of this that the term should not be seen as negative, but a tribute to the power of a people.

In my opinion it's a tragedy that white people have no term attributed to them without having all the obstacles in the way. The D.A.L.E. project is a powerful social move to bring about recognition of language and how the perception of words can influence and effect people.

However, a powerful bi-product of the D.A.L.E. project, which may have been intentional and may not have, is to think more in depth about the way people hear the language and not just speak it. The huge problem isn't that words are being said, but how the words are being heard and perceived. Either way, we all need to open our minds more.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GameDay can help to build community

First, congratulations on an excellent editorial in Wednesday's BG News. "Students want to be part of GameDay" made an insightful statement about community on this campus.

A few years ago, a number of people were involved with a project titled "Building Community." Some thought Building Community was possible while others viewed the project as unrealistic and even unnecessary.

As one of the members of the Building Community committee and proponent of the Students First philosophy that some on campus subscribe to, I believe the BG News editorial staff did an excellent job of communicating how a sports-related event can go beyond the actual game and develop a sense of community, teamwork and pride within an institution of higher education.

As you stated, on Saturday we are not members of a cultural group, minority group or Greek group, we are indeed FALCON FANS.

I hope all members of the BGSU community not only savor the moment but also incorporate the sense of BGSU community in our everyday lives that this institution so richly deserves.

There is no doubt that BGSU is on the road to becoming the premier learning community in Ohio and one of the best in the nation.

Parties prepare for debate on Sunday

Over the past several weeks, I have watched the political events on campus unfolding with what could only be called glee. As a political science major, I am saddened that so many college students, and Americans for that matter, think their vote does not count. In the 2000 Presidential Election, we learned two important things: always make sure to follow directions and everyone's vote matters.

This weekend, an important event will take place in our area (and no, it doesn't involve ESPN, although that is important as well). I am referring to the Democratic Presidential Debate which will take place Sunday night. While few will see the debate in person, Fox News (a "fair and balanced" media outlet) will air the debate for everyone not in attendance to enjoy (Please check your local listings).

BGSU College Democrats will be in Detroit on Sunday to attend a rally before the debate. You might remember the College Democrats as the organization on campus that registered the most new voters for the upcoming election.

This, however, isn't an ad for the College Democrats. Nor am I trying to put down the College Republicans, although there is an endless debate over which political party loves America more. The Republicans take shots at the Democrats and say they "hate America." The CSP recently published an entire "zine" (if you will) bashing the liberals on campus and in our country. Many Democrats think the Republicans only care about themselves or big business. Many Democrats don't agree with the actions of our President. But in the end, no matter our party lines, we are all Americans.

While the debate this Sunday night is a very important event, Nov. 4, 2003, is a much more important day. Although it is not a Presidential election year, it is nevertheless still your right and responsibility as an American to vote. No matter your party affiliation, let your voice be heard on Election Day. Spend some time in advance and do some research to make yourself an informed voter. Democracy is not a spectator sport.

Falcons on the playoff bubble

Samantha Anderson BG News

CRUNCH TIME: A BG player attempts to beat a Toledo player to the ball earlier this season. The Falcons next two games will weigh heavily on their post-season chances.

By Zach Baker
SPORTS EDITOR

The women's soccer team left BG knowing that the next two road games will decide the fate of their postseason aspirations.

In the tightly contested Mid-American Conference, eight teams will qualify for postseason play.

The Falcons are currently in eighth place with a 4-4-2 MAC record. Depending on how the next two games go, BG could find themselves hosting a playoff game in two weeks — or out of the playoffs completely.

The Falcons begin their quest for the playoffs with a game today against Ohio at 4 p.m.

Like the Falcons, the Bobcats are fighting for their playoff lives, at 4-6-1 and sitting at 10th place in the MAC.

Falcon coach Andy Richards said that while Ohio has struggled at times this season, they will present a tough challenge for BG.

"They're in the same position as us," Richards said. "They're playing good soccer but just haven't had the winning goals or the bit of luck when it's needed."

Richards said that in order for BG to get lucky, they will need to play well. He said there are several examples from this season when BG was rewarded for consistent play.

"I think you create your own luck," Richards said. "I'm sure people will be saying that we were lucky to come back against Miami, or lucky to get that late goal against Akron ... we'd have to argue that we earned that luck."

Following the game against Ohio, BG will travel to West Virginia to take on Marshall, a team that has had a difficult season, currently at 2-8 and in next to last place.

Richards said that regardless of Marshall's record, they always put forth a strong effort.

"They have always been a hard working team, and I expect to see the same from them again," Richards said. "It's their senior day and their last game of the season, so I'm sure they'll be pretty fired up to play."

With the Falcons controlling their own destiny in regards to a playoff appearance, BG player Jenny Berlovan said she looks for BG to come out strong this weekend.

"I'm expecting us to come out hard, because we know we have to win both games," Berlovan said. "I think we'll have confidence and take it to them."

Hype continues

By Chris Jurmann
THE NORTHERN STAR

The MAC West title will be decided Saturday afternoon in Bowling Green, Ohio.

Ignore undefeated Toledo; they won't be able to beat both Bowling Green and NIU. Tiebreakers, therefore, will all but assure NIU of the MAC West title provided they take care of Bowling Green this weekend.

It certainly seems like cause for excitement. I mean, we've all but wrapped up a bowl game for the first time in 20 years, right?

One problem. Bowling Green is the scariest mid-major team I've seen this season.

It was only one game, a game they lost, but it was enough to convince me to fear the Falcons.

BGSU went into Ohio State, the defending national champions, and fell 24-17, with the game decided on an interception with less than a minute remaining.

This team put fear into Ohio State and I'm sure they're keeping Joe Novak up late all this week.

It all starts at quarterback, where Josh Harris, or Lethal Weapon 5 as his Heisman campaign nicknames him, leads the most unique offense in the country.

Ninety percent of the offense is run out of the shotgun with four or five wide receivers. Every skill position is interchangeable.

A running back who also plays wide receiver and sometimes quarterback. The quarterback who is sometimes the running back and will occasionally shift to wide receiver before the start of the play.

And everything ends up in the hands of the Lethal Weapon. He can pass, run, catch and do everything. The whole system is so unconventional that it works and is impossible to defend against perfectly on every play.

The offense has worked so well it ranks No. 2 in the country. It allowed them to beat No. 11 Purdue and nearly snap Ohio State's winning streak before Wisconsin beat them a few weeks later.

The defense? To be honest I don't remember much. Maybe I was just too focused on how we would try and combat this Bowling Green offense.

I just wonder how we're supposed to stop Josh Harris now. The same Josh Harris we struggled to stop when he was a year younger and on the road.

This Falcon team wants revenge. We stole their thunder last year when we knocked them from among the undefeated.

Their resume is just as impressive as ours. Not to put down the great teams we beat, but right now Alabama, Maryland and Iowa State are a combined 10-12, while Purdue and Ohio State are a combined 12-2.

It's going to take a great game from one side of the ball to beat Bowling Green. Either the offense needs to put together its best performance of the year or it has to be the defense.

If either happens, we will win Saturday. If they don't, we will be sitting at home hoping for someone else to lose just like last year.

Editor's note: Article exchanged with NIU's campus newspaper.

Soccer closes out MAC schedule this weekend

By Chris Willig
SPORTS REPORTER

The men's soccer team has an extremely busy and important series of games in the upcoming weekend. The Falcons are facing two Mid-American Conference teams this weekend, one at home and one on the road.

The first stop this weekend will be in Huntington, W. Va. Today's game matches the Falcons up against Marshall at 5 p.m. Marshall is currently coming off a win against Alderson-Broadus. This weekend will also mark Marshall's last home game this season.

The Herd is currently 5-10-0 overall and 1-3-0 in the MAC. Despite their record Marshall has been very strong defensively in the past few games, and has only allowed four goals and four shutouts in the past seven games.

Following today's game the Falcons head home to close their MAC schedule on Sunday. The Falcons are hosting Western Michigan at Cochrane Field at 2 p.m.

The Broncos are coming off a tough loss to Michigan State on Wednesday, but should come out fresh after three days of rest. Western Michigan is currently 4-2-0 in conference play and find themselves in third place in the MAC, one spot ahead of the Falcons.

The Falcons are coming into this weekend after a tough loss to Oakland at home on Tuesday and the 6-3-3 Falcons are currently in the middle of the MAC with a 2-2-0 record.

Following this weekend's game the Falcons will know where they stand in the conference going into the MAC tournament. The MAC tournament follows two non-conference games for the Falcons and will begin on Nov. 8.

Ruggers win big at Northern Michigan

By Ashley Nehls
GUEST REPORTER

Despite the long haul that the women ruggers made last weekend to play Northern Michigan University in Traverse City, Mich. they still came out ahead.

The Falcons hit the road at 5 a.m., prepared for a long drive and a good game against NMU, and a good game is just what they got.

The Falcons left Traverse City with a 43-10 win bringing their record to 6-1.

The BG pack started off the game for the Falcons with prop, Cassie Jones assisting to a try for lock, Chris Fenzel. The try was completed with Sara Leary making the conversion kick. Line captain Hayley Feeney brought on the next try for the Falcons with another successful conversion kick from Leary. A missed penalty kick by eight-man Tasa Seibert left the score at 14-0 before the Northern ruggers followed BG's lead and scored a try of their own, with a successful conversion kick. A penalty kick by Leary brought the Falcon's lead to 17-7 going into half time.

"The match was very competitive for the first forty minutes," referee Scott Wright said. "Where the second half exposed the teams' fitness levels with BGSU putting four more unanswered tries over."

Katie Finnegan was the first to kick off the second half for the Falcons with a try and another winning conversion kick from Leary. Fenzel put her second try for the day in the books for the Falcons with a missed conversion bringing the score to 29-7. The Northern Michigan ruggers broke the Falcons' scoring streak with a completed penalty kick bringing the score to 29-10.

Leary was the next to rack up points for the Falcons with a successful try and conversion kick. Claire Trainer had a break away up the field resulting in yet another try for BG with one last conversion from Leary bringing the final score of the game to 43-10.

"I feel that the team was communicating well, during this game," prop, Brooke McCleary said. "This caused us to execute our passing, resulting in more tries."

The Falcon ruggers hope to continue their good communication and their winning record Saturday against Kalamazoo for their last Michigan Rugby Union game of the season.

Spikers travel to Michigan

By Brandon Drake
SPORTS REPORTER

This weekend the Bowling Green State University volleyball team starts their four-game road trip by heading to Michigan as they continue their run through the Mid-American Conference schedule.

The Falcons had a strong outing last weekend, sweeping both Toledo and Northern Illinois in conference play. The four game win over the Rockets gave BGSU its first season sweep over Toledo since 1989. The Falcons ended a three-game losing streak to the Huskies with a four-set victory last Saturday night. Head coach Denise Van De Walle has gotten the Falcons squad to hit their stride at just the right time of the season.

This weekend the Falcons look to continue their recent success, as they are 11-10 overall and 3-4 in MAC play going into this weekend. Friday night, Bowling Green will travel to Eastern Michigan (16-4, 4-3) to take on the Eagles which have dropped their last three matches, all to MAC foes. Last year, BGSU dropped a four-set match to EMU at Anderson Arena.

On Saturday, Bowling Green will take on Central Michigan (10-11, 4-4 MAC) that is coming off two five-set wins versus Eastern Michigan and Marshall over the past week. They have won four of their last five matches. Earlier this season, the Falcons dropped a four-set match to the Chippewas at Anderson Arena.

The Falcons look to avenge a 3-1 defeat at the hands of Central Michigan back on October 10. CMU held Bowling Green to a .171 hitting percentage while hitting at .303 themselves.

The MAC race is extremely tight and one win or loss could drastically change the Falcons seeding for the conference tournament. Bowling Green currently sits in the middle of the seven-team West Division in sixth place. The Falcons are one and a half games back off the leader, Ball State, and only one game ahead of last-place Northern Illinois.

BG is averaging a .214 hitting percentage and 15.13 kills per game, led by Taylor Twite's 3.69 and Susie Norris' 2.91. Samantha Rennau is third on the team, averaging 2.88 kills per game and Melissa Mohr is right behind, accounting for 2.11. Amber Mareski, who is averaging 8.83 assists and co-captain Sara Sikorski, who is averaging 6.87, have combined to produce 1,035 assists this season.

This weekend is just the beginning of a four game road trip. The Falcons will then return home for three matches, when they host Miami (OH), Ball State and Akron.

SLAP SHOT: A BG hockey player takes a shot on goal against Notre Dame last weekend. The Icers take on Union in BG this weekend.

By Kevin Shields
SPORTS REPORTER

The Union Dutchmen of the Eastern College Athletic Conference will be coming to BG this weekend with an undefeated team that has gotten off to a 3-0 start. It will be the first non-league series for the Falcons this season, who have gotten off to a 1-3-0 start on the year and are looking for their first home win of the year.

"It's going to be a good test for us this weekend," head coach Scott Paluch said. "This is a team that gets a lot out of the good work ethic and skill that they bring to the game. We know we'll have a tough two games with this team this weekend and it's important that we win these non-league games."

Union returns a young team that went 14-16-4 a year ago and finished in the middle of the ECAC standings. They have a brand new coach this year in Nathan Leaman, who was a former assistant at Harvard.

The team is lead by forward Scott Seney, who has three goals on the year along with five assists for a total of eight points. Forward Joel Beal is coming off a two goal game and is also another big offensive player for the Dutchmen. Forwards Jordan Webb, Brian Kerr and Glenn Sanders are other playmakers up front, while on defense they are Brent Booth, Chris DiStefano, and Matt Vagvolgyi. They are a big team and like to create plays off of their fore-check, which is something coach Paluch knows his team will have to be aware of.

Icers host Union this weekend

"They are a team that will get a lot of their forecheck and can bring a real physical game too," Paluch said. "What they've been able to get last year and so far this season is the ability to have players finish good forechecks then get some good chances to create goals."

For BG, the big offensive leaders so far in the season have been the two senior captains D'Arcy McConvey and Kevin Bieksa. McConvey has three points from a goal and two assists, while Bieksa leads the team with four points on two goals along with two assists. Bieksa leads the team in shots with 18 and knows he and McConvey both need to step up this year in creating points.

"I figure I can help us out a lot this year especially on the power play," Bieksa said. "I'm in a position on the power play where I can put some shots on net and create rebounds for the guys in front of the net. This year me and D'Arcy definitely feel a bit of the obligation to take shots and create offense being seniors with having to take most of the load."

Three of the Falcon's talented freshmen have already scored points this season as well. Rich Meloche leads the group with two goals, followed by James Unger with a goal and Jonathan Sigalek with an assist.

The Falcons are coming off a tough home opener in which they out shot Notre Dame by a good margin, but were unable to get the puck in the net. They were able to get their first win of the year though at Notre Dame last Friday. Bieksa knows the last few games will bring confidence to him and teammates this weekend.

"Getting that first win on the road helped us a lot in giving us some confidence," Bieksa said. "We'd of liked to come back here and get a win, but it'll give us confidence knowing that we out shot them by such a large margin. I think we are ready to go this weekend and we'll need to be a little more focused in the first three minutes of the game after giving up two goals last week right away."

The game tonight will begin at 7:05 p.m. at the Ice Arena and Saturday's game will be at 8:05 p.m. due to the football game.

We have all heard the little creepy superstition, "Don't you ever laugh when a hearse goes by, for you may be the next to die." Well, certainly Sarah Snook at Baldwin-Wallace College didn't seem to care. Not the typical college student, Snook will be showing off her 1966 Cadillac Miller-Meteor Duplex in Toledo's first-ever Classic Hearse and Ambulance Show this weekend.

The show is only one of the many ghoulish events to take place in Toledo during The Black Cat Strut which is, in essence, a large Halloween costume party that benefits those animals at the Paws and Whiskers Shelter. It includes live music, food, costume contests, a cash bar, psychics and fortune tellers.

PATTY HEARSE

Snook's Cadillac, which she lovingly calls "Patty," is actually a restored hearse. "My car's full name is Patty Hearse, as in Patty Hearst. That name came from the last owner, but I think it applies to me too because that car has robbed my bank account way too many times," said Snook.

"Patty" is 21 feet long and about 7,500 pounds. The hearse's color inside and out is cascade green, which is a cross between seafoam green and mint green, which makes it a rarity at car shows. "[The hearses] are all black, and when you're in a parking lot full of black hearses and you have a black hearse too, it isn't easy to find your car. With 'Patty' I never have problems finding her—she's a looker all right."

The car has been restored to look like it did in its glory days and now Snook boasts a registered antique car. However, it wasn't an easy task to get "Patty" into shape due to the numerous repairs and hard-to-

'Evil Dead II' delivers new twist on horror

By Sean Corp
PULSE WRITER

I had been considering what film to review for Halloween for quite some time, but it seems fate has chosen for me, "Evil Dead II: Dead by Dawn."

The director, Sam Raimi, is on the top of Hollywood, shooting "Spiderman II."

The lead actor, Bruce Campbell, is getting rave reviews for his new role in "Bubba Ho-Tep," a horror film about an elderly Elvis fighting a demon in a retirement home with the help of a black John F. Kennedy.

There is even recent buzz about the franchise being resurrected with the hero, Ash, fighting off Freddy and Jason in a sequel to last summer's surprise hit.

The "Evil Dead" franchise marked the beginning of Raimi's career. The director of films like "Spiderman," "The Gift" and "A Simple Plan" made the film in college with a friend from his hometown, B-movie icon Campbell.

The film is low budget, low-brow at its finest. It is basically the same story of the original Evil Dead, but with better writing, acting, directing and a much larger budget.

The movie plays into clichés, but takes them to their most extreme conclusion making the movie a perfectly horrific satire. The plot centers on Ash (Campbell) going with his girlfriend to an abandoned cabin.

When an evil incantation is read, it releases evil spirits into the woods and soon Ash confronts the walking dead, or "deadites."

There are corpses wandering, skeletons dancing, limbs missing, heads rolling and blood is everywhere.

It is a movie that revels in its excess of blood, violence and screwball comedy. A perfect example is the infamous scene where Ash's hand is possessed by an evil entity and he is forced to cut it off.

The scene is alternately hilarious and gruesome as the possession is played for Three Stooges type laughs but also bloody and violent.

There is also a scene reminiscent of the famous scene in "A Nightmare on Elm Street" where blood shoots out of a bed and onto the ceiling. In "Evil Dead II" Ash looks through a hole in the wall and is bombarded with gallons and gallons of blood shooting into his face.

In "Nightmare on Elm Street" it is played to chill you to the bone, but in "Evil Dead II," it is played for laughs.

Sam Raimi directs the movie like it has Attention Deficit Disorder. He has Ash jump from scene to scene with no time to rest and reflect on what is happening.

He confronts one evil entity and a bizarre situation after another and the manic pace perfectly suits the movie.

There is one scene in particular when we see Ash from the point of view of the supernatural force in the woods. The camera wisks quickly through the woods and knocks over the cabin door chasing Ash through the house.

In one continuous shot, he goes from room to room knocking down doors and laying waste to the cabin. It is something that you truly have never seen before.

The performance of Bruce Campbell is absurdly over the top, but he knows it and plays into it. When he replaces his severed hand with a chainsaw, looks into the camera and slyly says, "Groovy" you cannot help but laugh.

However, Raimi and Campbell are talented enough to make you laugh for all the right reasons.

Brown theatre hosts controversy

By Andrew Clayman
PULSE WRITER

The latest production from the Department of Theatre and Film, "The Laramie Project," has elicited plenty of emotion, discussion and controversy during its current run at the Joe E. Brown Theatre. Of course, this is the play's exact intention, and it is carried out brilliantly by a very talented group of performers.

"The Laramie Project" takes a raw but objective look at the aftermath of the Matthew Shepard case in the town of Laramie, WY. In the fall of 1998, Shepard, a student at the University of Wyoming, was beaten and tortured by two men who disliked his homosexual lifestyle. Shepard eventually died from the injuries he had suffered, and his story remained the focal point of the national media for many weeks. In the process, the small town of Laramie became ground zero in the nation's ongoing debates over tolerance, religion and concepts of justice.

Inspired by the incredible reaction to the Shepard case, playwright Moises Kaufman and the Tectonic Theatre Project traveled to Laramie in hopes of uncovering the human element of a real-life drama. They interviewed over 200 people, a number of whom would become central characters in "The Laramie Project."

"The amazing characteristic of this show is that every word comes from those people," said Anne Marie Sweeney, telecommunications major and member of the ensemble cast. "Nothing is exaggerated, projected or imagined. What you see is what you get. But the play does well to show all sides of the story."

With nine performers portraying about six characters each, almost every opinion is given a voice, no matter how offensive that particular speaker may be. But in the end, the final judgments are made not by the players, but by the audience. In this way, the play avoids being preachy and serves mainly as a study of human conditions.

As director Carrie Lee notes in the playbill, "The Laramie Project" reminds us "of the complexity of the human spirit - the depths to which it can sink and the heights to which it can climb."

Aside from affecting audiences, the play has also had a major impact on its cast, which includes Bowling Green students Matthew Gretzinger, Elizabeth Davis, Julio Alberto Sepulveda, Shelley Nixon, Khary Jackson, James Strunk, Jason P. Suel, Anne Marie Sweeney and Toledo student Cathy J. Skutch.

"My personal experiences with 'The Laramie Project' have been extraordinary," Sweeney said, crediting her director and castmates. "Everybody has just worked incredibly hard, especially the men and women behind the scenes. They never get enough credit. This is really my ideal form of theater; a story with a message of life and the opportunity for social change."

BILL MALLONEE

PERFUMED LETTER
Paste Records

With a style that is reminiscent of old school 60s rock with some experimentation on the side, Bill Mallonee's latest CD Perfumed Letter delivers what his fans have enjoyed for years.

Bill Mallonee writes some very detailed lyrics that spin poetic stories about love, but therein lies the album's biggest problem. Every one of his songs, with perhaps the exception of "Shirts & Skins," is about love; a subject that has been written about since the beginning of time. Now, it would be understandable if a few, even half of the songs discussed the trials of loving another person, but this CD has them in excess.

Even so, his songs are performed well despite their somewhat repetitive theme. Most songs have good beats and solid guitar playing. In almost every track there is some kind of synthesizer or woodwind instrument for variety, though these are used too liberally in some songs, making them just sound strange. Despite being a little too experimental at times, overall the CD is entertaining.

Previously in the band Vigilantes of Love, Bill Mallonee has been writing and performing music for 13 years.

Now a solo artist, he takes guest musicians with him on his road tours.

CHARLOTTE MARTIN

IN PARENTHESES
RCA Records

The angelic voice of Charlotte Martin will astound any of her listeners. Her beautiful piano chords and melodies harmonize her amazing singing voice.

Charlotte Martin, 26, is a rising star. With a voice like Sarah McLachlan, energy like Tori Amos, attitude like Fiona Apple and anger like Ani DiFranco, she expresses a unique talent.

The first song, "Your Armor" on her new EP, In Parentheses, she entrances with her musical talent and it is difficult to be extracted again into reality.

Martin's passion for music is evident with her vigorous strength in her words. She seems to encourage her listeners that there can be strength in anything. She is true to her heart, honest, encouraging and powerful.

There are only four songs on In Parentheses. In every single song, she has a way of making her audience fall in love with her. She vocalizes the events of many of our problems.

Through her voice, a person can feel what she feels. She's incredibly captivating.

Her music is power induced with her melodic piano expressions. Her anger rings through the speakers with her magnificently strong voice.

Martin can play more than one instrument, which is very impressive. On the track, "Monster," she plays the electric piano, synthesizer bass, drum programming as well as vocals.

She writes her own poems, sings her own songs and writes her own music. What more could you ask for? A woman that can play more than one instrument and express herself in a manner that affects her audience.

Being an emotional musician for Martin is doing what she loves.

Charlotte Martin is destined to be a huge star.

JUCIFER

I NAME YOU DESTROYER
Velocette Records

It seems these days the latest rage in rock is the two-piece band. The White Stripes seem to have made it famous. Akron's Black Keys are doing their best to sound like Jack and Meg White, and Athens, Georgia's Jucifer are doing everything they can possibly do to tear down what the Stripes and the Keys are building.

In other words, Jucifer sounds nothing like the White Stripes or Black Keys.

Ed Livengood and Amber Valentine make up the duo, and unlike the blues-based crunch of the Stripes or the Keys, Jucifer is a blend of sonic, dreamy and sometimes industrial rock. In fact, the sound of Jucifer is so diverse they manage on the first half of "Queen B" to sound like Slayer, then quickly transform into the shoegazin' sounds of The Verve or even Slowdive. It's a remarkable accomplishment.

Valentine sings, is the guitarist and is the blood and guts.

While easing us into such songs like the opening "Little Fever," she sounds like Kim Deal of the Breeders. Eight minutes later she echoes the primal screams of Sonic Youth's Kim Gordon on the vicious but cerebral "Queen B." Livengood is a solid drummer that anchors Valentine's hard guitar and even harder lyrics, "I know you got a great big hammer," from "Vulture Song."

The sound of Jucifer is definitely their own though. Every song has a high octane, dense feel ready and primed for some sort of musical explosion.

"Memphis" is trip-hop, lead by a sinister bass line and "Fight Song" is grunge, grunge and a little more grunge, toned to near perfection by Valentine. She's naughty, she plays guitar and she sings. I love this woman. I love this band.

Sad to say, investment fees and expenses will probably outlast us all. That's why Dr. Sereno was afraid of getting eaten alive.

So he turned to a company famous for keeping costs down. That meant more money for him and less for the monsters.

Holiday house handcrafts costumes

By Andrew Scharf
CITY NEWS EDITOR

Sitting across from a cornfield along Route 6, the house seems unsuspecting, but inside it is home to some of your worst nightmares.

A terrifying world where mummies, werewolves, vampires and other movie monsters sit side by side exists within the walls. The store is a fantasy world where nurses, pirates, kings and grizzly bears share an aisle.

For Gregg Kerns this world is not a nightmare or a fantasy, it's everyday life. Kerns along with his brother, Doug, own and manage the Costume Holiday House.

The store specializes in hand-crafted costumes for Halloween, theater productions and promotions. The business consists of three stores located in Toledo, Columbus and Fremont.

The family-run business has been in operation for over 40 years. Dorothy Kerns began the costume business in 1959 after designing well received mice costumes for a Mardi Gras party. An interest in her costume design skills quickly grew. Soon she was overwhelmed by costume requests. Kerns said his mother never said no to a costume request.

What started as a hobby became a full fledged business for the family in 1969. That year the Fremont Costume Holiday House was built next to the Kerns' family home.

Kerns spent his entire youth growing up around costumes. In grade school, Kerns was embarrassed by his mom's profession. Kerns said he used to tell classmates that his mom was a home-maker.

But as he grows older, Kerns began to embrace the family business. As a teenager he worked in the store's mask department.

"It was kind of cool growing up," Kerns said. "I always knew I would have the best costume for Halloween."

In 1985 Kerns graduated from the Ohio State University with a degree in marketing. Kerns planned to spend a year helping his parents with the business following graduation.

But eighteen years later still works to improve the Costume Holiday House.

"It's still challenging, that's why I am still here right now," Kerns said. "There are still a lot of things I want to do yet."

Kerns' business plans have been working.

The costume shop has since expanded to stores in Toledo and Columbus. The Costume Holiday House has also had some high profile companies as customers. The shop has made costumes for Marshall Field's, American Red Cross, Six Flags, the Toledo Zoo and Walt Disney World.

Unlike his childhood years, Kerns is not embarrassed about what he does for a living, even if it is hard to explain.

"Usually I am pretty proud of what I do, but it's never a two-second conversation," Kerns said.

Kerns' strong sense of pride and work ethic are appreciated by his employees, some of whom have worked for the company for over 10 years.

"He's a good person to work for," said Ina Blazer, manager of the Toledo Costume Holiday House. "I feel like he is also a good friend."

Kerns' parents and brother still live next door to the Fremont store. The entire family is still active in business. The Kerns have been able to survive working with each other.

"There's been ups and downs," Kerns said. "Being in a family business, you're bound to have arguments."

Surrounded by so many costumes everyday used to bother Kerns, but it no longer does.

"There was awhile where I didn't even get dressed up for Halloween anymore," Kerns said.

Costume Holiday House features 50,000 costumes, with 95 percent of them made on site.

"There was awhile where I didn't even get dressed up for Halloween anymore," Kerns said.

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY

Your guide to the game!

WHEN NORTHERN ILLINOIS HAS THE BALL...

they're looking for 32. "The Burner," ranked third in the nation in rushing average at 132.7 yards per game and had a field day in De Kalb last year when the teams met. The team is equally threatening passing, if only because quarterback Josh Haldi gets single coverage every time because of his back.

WHEN BOWLING GREEN HAS THE BALL...

you might see a lot of points. NIU is without starting middle linebacker Nick Duffy, who is out for the season, and quarterback Josh Harris has had another prolific year behind center (or in the shotgun, if you prefer) for the Falcons. If BG's offense can keep their defense off the field, it may be a long day for Joe Novak's Huskies.

Letters from our Best Fans

My First Move-In Experience
By Donna Zadd
Angela L. Gorter's MOM

As I moved my daughter into college her junior year, I was amazed by how easy it was this time. Of course, the reasons were obvious, she lives off-campus and had to move-in one week before school started due to a job commitment. Reminiscing on the ride home, I "fondly" recalled the first time she moved into college. Her freshman year at BG was going to be an exciting and apprehensive time for both of us. We got up early and packed up the van (I had to borrow her grandfather's van!). I kept worrying about the position the refrigerator that we borrowed from her uncle was in. "Just lay it flat," he told us. Once the van was packed, I realized that I couldn't see very well out of the back window. "Oh well," I thought, "It's only a two-hour drive." As we passed the cornfields, which everyone had told us about, and pulled up to the exit, I realized that we didn't leave early enough. While we sat at the exit for 45 minutes, two thoughts were prominent in my head. I wished that I knew the other way to BG, like we do now, and I hoped that the refrigerator wasn't too big for her room (I measured it as the letter instructor). Finally parked, I remembered my friend's idea to bring a furniture dolly, an idea that should not have been shrugged off so lightly. If I had the money, I would have paid someone to move her in that day! There was only one elevator, and her second floor dorm room was way on the other side of the building. Thankfully, it didn't rain; although, the day was long and hot. Having survived that day, sophomore year was just as challenging. This time, we brought the dolly and took everything up the stairs to her third floor room. It only took us five trips! Needless to say, I passed my "stress test" at BG with flying colors.

Thank you to my daughter for studying hard, getting involved in college activities and keeping in touch with me during her college experience. Here's looking forward to senior year move-in with no reservations!

When It Comes to Support, Sometimes Parents are Our Biggest Fans!

Several parents of The BG News staff members share their thoughts on Family Weekend and what it means to be a parent of a Bowling Green Student

Kathy Whitaker-Foley,
mother of Managing Editor
Carrie Whitaker

There they were, walking and waving saying their goodbyes as the old faded into the new. Family weekend 2001, our family wished a fond farewell to the old Freddie and Freida Falcon as the new mascots took the football field. We enjoyed the exchange and loved the atmosphere of family and tradition. For instant I thought of my college days, how now the new is replacing the old again. Sitting next to my daughter, then a freshman at BGU. My old college memories were being replaced with her new ones. What a thrilling and sentimental time all rolled up into one.

- 8) You and the Financial Aid Office are on a first name basis.
- 7) Your long distance phone bill looks more like your house mortgage payment.

- 4) After move-in day you discover muscle aches where you didn't even know you had muscles.
- 3) When you ask your student how Final Exams went & they reply "What Exams?"

"It's an opportunity to learn about cultures from the majority of continents, and to learn in a fun way."

ALLISON GERBERE, PRESIDENT OF WORLD STUDENT ASSOCIATION

International Fair improved for this year

By Kendra Ludemann
REPORTER

Visitors to the Bowen-Thompson Student Union this weekend will have the opportunity to explore many different countries and cultures.

The World Student Association is sponsoring an International Fair on the first floor of the Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

"The main purpose of the International Fair is to educate visiting families and students about different cultures," said World Student Association graduate advisor Katie Baxter.

Booths featuring items from different cultures will be displayed throughout the Ballroom in an attempt to provide a fun and educational atmosphere.

The World Student Association will have three booths at the event. Groups participating include the India Student Association, Chinese Students and Scholars, Spanish Club, French Club and the Russian Club.

A few international students from Bulgaria and Nepal will also set up displays independently.

At the fair, some students will dress in traditional clothing from the country they are representing.

Flags, jewelry and musical instruments may also be on display, Baxter said. Select booths may also have food, videos, art work and music.

"Items displayed are cultural items—symbols of tradition and religion," Baxter said.

The Latin rock band, La Revancha, will perform in the Falcon's Nest during the event.

Visitors to the International Fair will receive programs designed as passports which can be stamped at each country's booth.

This feature should engage even the youngest of visitors during Family Weekend, according to Baxter.

"This is great especially for younger brothers and sisters," she said.

There will also be a trivia game, face painting and balloon animals.

Members of the India Student Association will also offer henna tattoos.

In addition, visitors can have their pictures taken in a photo booth with students dressed in traditional clothing.

Allison Greber, president of the World Student Association, said she enjoyed seeing how much fun everyone had at the International Fair last year.

"It's an opportunity to learn about cultures from the majority of continents, and to learn in a fun way," Greber said.

Due to the success of last year's event, this year's fair will be extended two hours longer and was able to get more groups to participate.

Talent Show features family fun for weekend

By Julie DiFranco
REPORTER

Bowling Green State University has hosted a talent show for Family Weekend the past three years. The Office of Campus Involvement wanted to offer families and students a family-friendly activity that allowed BGSU to showcase its talented students.

This year, there will be eight people performing in the Talent Show. Most of the contestants showcase their musical talents by singing, but Jason Schwab will be juggling instead.

Schwab is competing in the competition because of his involvement last year—when he won second prize.

The show is a time when students can share not-so-common hobbies like juggling, according to Schwab.

"With a talent like juggling, you don't get to show it off much," he said.

Schwab will be juggling to "Ball and Chains" by Sublime.

Junior Stephanie Wancheck who also participated in the Talent Show last year, appreciates the opportunity to perform in public at events like the show. Wancheck will be singing "You Got a Friend in Me" by James Taylor.

"It's a great opportunity for students to get out and perform in front of students," she said.

According to Wancheck, the show will be fun because the students in it all have a common interest for performing and they don't feel as if they are competing against one another.

The Office of Campus Involvement would like to see more students enter the event, but overall they are happy with the turnout, according to Heather Birshara, program coordinator in the Office of Campus Involvement and organizer of the event.

"Many of these students love to perform but aren't performance majors, so it is a way for them to showcase their talents," she said. "We would love to see more students audition and be in the show, but we understand that students may plan to simply spend time with their family during the weekend, or go to the football game."

There was no fee to be able to perform; all a student had to do to enter was audition. Admission to the talent show is also free.

The first prize winner will be given a $100 gift certificate to the University Bookstore, second prize is a $50 certificate and third prize will be $25.

According to Bishara, organizers are hoping for an audience of at least 100 people.

Game day was fast approaching here in Buckeye world. Everyone was gearing up for their tailgating parties and everyone had on their Scarlet and Gray. Growing up in Buckeye country has always been a source of pride, a way of life, something that was taught to children from a very early age. On this particular game day, though, I had to show a pride of a different kind. My son is a junior at Bowling Green State University, and on this day my heart was just not with the Buckeyes.

The Falcons were coming to Columbus to take on the mighty Buckeyes and I, for one, was rooting for the underdog! I'm sure that people here thought I was from another planet. Who in their right mind would root for Bowling Green? I took this as an opportunity, though, to share my thoughts with them about what a great school it really was.

When I first took my son to college, I think I was more frightened than he was! Bowling Green seemed so far away. From the start, though, the staff and students made you feel welcomed and safe.

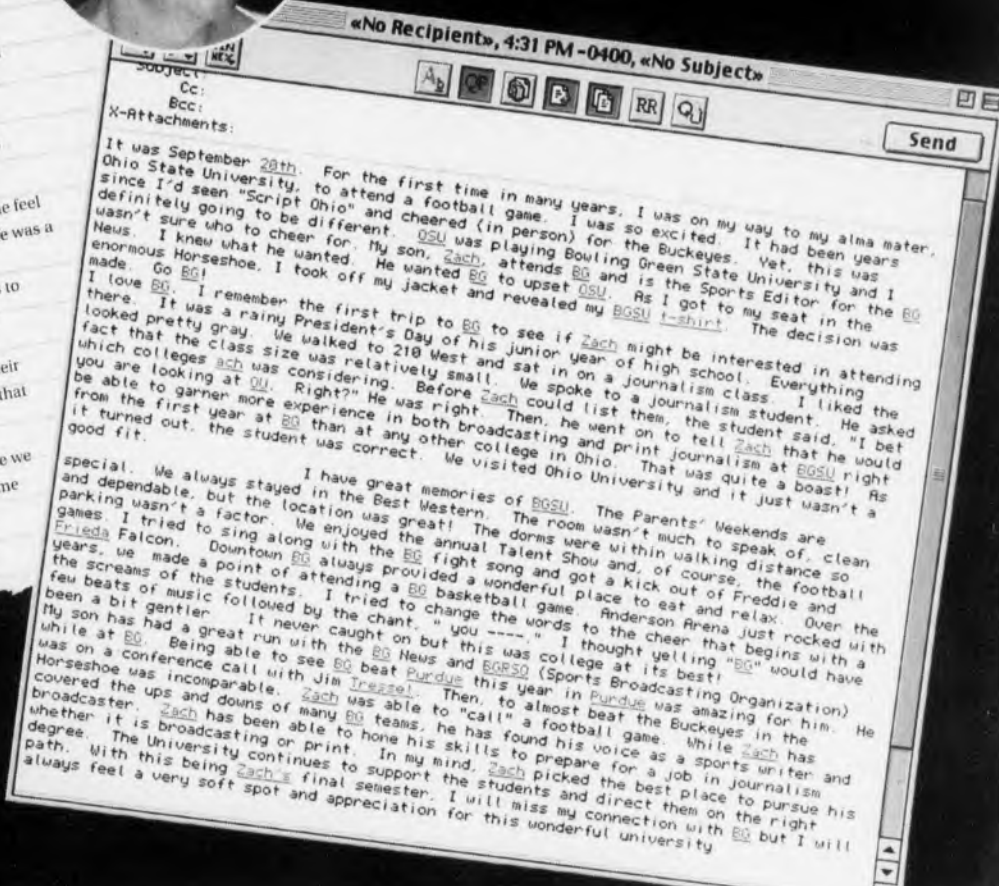

Unlike a huge college campus like Ohio State, Bowling Green has never made me feel like I was lost in the system. Student pride is evident wherever you go. Dorm life was a great experience, due in part by the caring and training of the RAs. There are so many activities to get involved in, from fraternities and sororities to student government, where students can really make a difference. The pride doesn't stop with the students, though. It was evidenced in the caring and professionalism of the professors, who take the time to really get to know their students. I have watched my son grow and mature and blossom and know that this is largely due to being in a great school.

So, as game day arrived, I sat with friends, watching in anticipation. While we all know the outcome of that game, I truly believe that Bowling Green came out the winner.

The students of Bowling Green showed the mighty Buckeyes what student pride was all about. I am proud to say that my heart lies with the Falcons!
